KISSES. Give me kistes-all is waste Save the luxury of the taste, And for kissing-kisses live Only when we take and give, Kiss me, then, Every moment and again.

And the lest seldom slips But it strikes a tender chord; And a kiss was on the lips Of the wretch that sold his Lord. - Whitelme Reid.

Mrs. Dougherty's Death and the Inquest

That Fellowed It. Mrs. Honora Dougherty, a woman fifty years of age, living at No. 216 Third street northwest, was injured about half-past one o'clock yesterday morning, as it was stated, by falling or comping out of a second-story window, and died a few hours later. The story was started yesterday morning that there had been some disagreement between her and her husband, John F. Dougherty, and her death was the result of foul play. The police therefore took charge of the premises. About ants were driven from the house by the frenzied Dougherty, who flourished A PISTOL AND KNIFE and swore that he would not have his wife cut up. Sergeant Brosnan and Officer Prather thereupon noon Dr. J. F. Hartigan went to the house to make a post-mortem examination, but he and his assist-

Dr. Townshend testified to having been called by Dougherty to attend the woman. He thought that when he first saw her she was

They declined to take her in. I said 'Lady, can't you take her in for to-night?" 'No; not to-night,' she said. The little Sister remonstrated, but the other said "No." I said: 'Lady, just as quick as Judge Hoar comes back I will find out what is the amount of money that comes to this hospital,' and I then took tny wife home. After that I shut up the house; she tried to jump out of the front window, but I taught her. I remonstrated with her till I got her to lie down. I said: 'Heavenly Jesus! is that ! you?" I saw she was all blood." Dougherty then told about bringing the wounded woman into the house and about going to Hickling's drug store. As he was in his underelothing, a policeman stopped him, and, after learning what the trouble was, sent him to Dr. Townshead. After telling about the death, Dougherty added: "We never had a quarrel in our lives. There never was a happier family. She handled all the money. The night I was married I put $7,000 in her apron." The jury, after a short consultation, returned a verdict that deceased came to her death "from injuries to the head received in falling or jumping

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

FIFTY YEARS IN A MARYLAND KITCHEN, By Mrs. B. C. Howard. Philadelphia: J. B. Lip-pincott & Co. Washington: G. A. Whittaker. This excellent cook-book, which is now in its fourth edition, is valuable to the young housekeeper particularly on account of the simple manner in which the directions are given and their practical character. The receipts are all claimed to be the results of the author's experi once in her own kitchen. The work covers a wide area, and contains much information of a general nature in regard to the care of a household tha will be found of value. The success which has attended this book a tests in the best possible man ner its importance and its popularity.

A NAMELESS NOBLEMAN. Boston: James B Osgood & Co. This is the title of the first volume of the "Round Robin" series of anonymous novelissued by the Messrs. Osgood & Co. It is an attract ive story and will be read with interest. Th scenes are laid in Paris and Provence, Quebec and New England, and the actors are French noble and Puritan rustics, moving in the most quain and picturesque years of the colonial era. With out obtrusive definition or ostentations analysis the chief characters-the wily but well-meaning abbe, the gallaut young baron, the lovely Valerie the sweet Puritan maiden-are clearly indicated and are combined in situations full of intensit and pathos. The book is full of charming descrip tion, stirring dialogues, and dramatic situations and the veteran reader of romances will fail t guess the denonement. The interest will not b diminished when it is known that the plot i founded on the actual traditions of an honorable family in the old colony of Massachusetts, region where ancestral legends are handed dow for centuries with religious care.

ADVANCED READINGS AND RECITATIONS. By AUSTIN B. FLETCHER, A. M., LL. B., Professor of Oratory, Brown University and Boston University of Law, Boston: Lee & Shepard, Wash ington: William Ballantyne.

This work is intended to meet the reuirements of classes in colleges, post-graduat schools, and other educational institutions. The selections are mostly those which we remember t either have recited ourselves or to have hear others recite when we were a boy. That was some time ago, however, and other pieces narratin incidents occurring since our childhood and the product of recently developed talent are forms which will make effective declamations. The seven short stories in this volume originally appeared as magazine articles, and so had been extensively read before their collection in book form. They are strong and well-written stories, with plenty of action to keep the interest from lagging, and they are made instructive from the inportant part which modern science plays in the development of the plot. The principal personages are railroad men, telegraph operators, and mining engineers, classes met in every-day life.

THE STUDENT'S DREAM. Chicago: Jansen, McClurg & Co. The author, who very properly refuses place his name to this sophomorie production, will probably, as he grows older, regret the smount of money he expended in placing this "horoscope of mental growth, containing a metaphysicial discovery" in cold type. The dream seems to be that within a few generations we shall change our present religious belief so as to adopt the theory of evo-lution as our faith, with Herbert Spencer occupying the relation to the new doctrine that Christ holds to the relation to the new doctrine that Christ holds to the present accepted religion. In his vealy days the aspirant for literary honors usually has an attack either of poetry or metaphysics. In this instance it is the latter malady which afflicts the author. He will get over it, however, and in after years will probably be much surprised to think that he ever wrote "A Student's Dream," when he might have employed the time spent in that work much more profitably.
